Sessions of Indian Parliament

The president from time to time summons each House of Parliament to meet. But, the maximum gap between two sessions of Parliament can not be more than six months

There are usually three sessions in a year

1. the Budget Session (February to May);
2. the Monsoon Session (July to September); and
3. the Winter Session (November to December)

Budget Session

The budget session is held from February to May every year, The Budget is usually presented on the last working day of the month of February. This session every year starts with the President's Address to both Houses.

Monsoon Session

The monsoon session is held from July to September every year. This is held after a break of two months after the budget session. In this session, matters of public interest are discussed

Winter Session

The winter session of Parliament is held in mid-November to mid-December every year. It is the shortest session of all.

Joint Session of Parliament

The joint sitting of the Parliament is called by the country's President, Article 108 of the Constitution says about a joint Parliament session. The Constitution of India provides for the joint sitting of the Parliament's two Houses, the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha, in order to break any deadlock between the two.
